

MARIA DOMIDE

I am a reliable, self-initiative, independent and motivated work-oriented person that strives for attention to detail and aims to achieve a high level of professionalism. My main strengths lie in working by being well informed, systematical and properly organized; I am a rationalist that looks at everything through numbers.

My passion for Architecture and design emerged from a very early age. During middle school my inclination towards exact sciences such as Mathematics, Physics, and Computer Science surfaced and throughout my studies I asserted my extended skills, knowledge and potential in these subjects by participating in student scientific sessions, competitions and Olympics. The Bachelor's course in Architecture I just graduated productively merged and trained both my artistic and technical skills, enriching my appetite for further development in this field.
